Representatives Money and Hall Fight a Duel in the Capitol.

The Former, Mississippi's Senator-Elect, Is Badly Wounded in the Face,

Row Begins in a Dispute Over the Bill Reorganizing the Navy Personnel,

NO CHALLENGE IS TO FOLLOW.

Colonel Money's Friends Advise Him to Let the Matter Drop and He Will Abide by Their Decision-Records of Both Men.

By Julius Chambers.

Washington, April 23 .- "For God's sake, fion't let my sons hear of this!" were the words uttered by Representative and Senntor-elect Money, of Mississippl, as he emerged from the room of the Committee on Naval Affairs shortly after noon to-day, with the blood flowing from a gaping wound over his eye, which had been inflicted with a heavy sponge cup thrown by Representative Hall, of Missouri. "If my boys learn of this affair before I see them they will certainly kill that man Hall, I want to attend to this case myself."

Not since the killing of Representative Taulbee by a correspondent named Kincald in the Capitol, about three years ago, has so much excitement been caused as that occasioned by the bloody affray to-day between Hernando De Soto Money, of Mississippi, and Uriel Sebree Hall, of Missouri. Mr. Money has a brilliant war record, and Mr. Hall is what would be termed In the West "a game man."

Representatives Francis H. Wilson, of New York; Meyer, of Louisiana; Hall, Money, Commodore Phythian. Clerk Ba-+ lett and Messenger Tom Coakley were in the room of the Committee on Naval Affairs Commodore Phythian and the members of Congress were informally discusing the bill for the reorganization of the personnel of the navy.

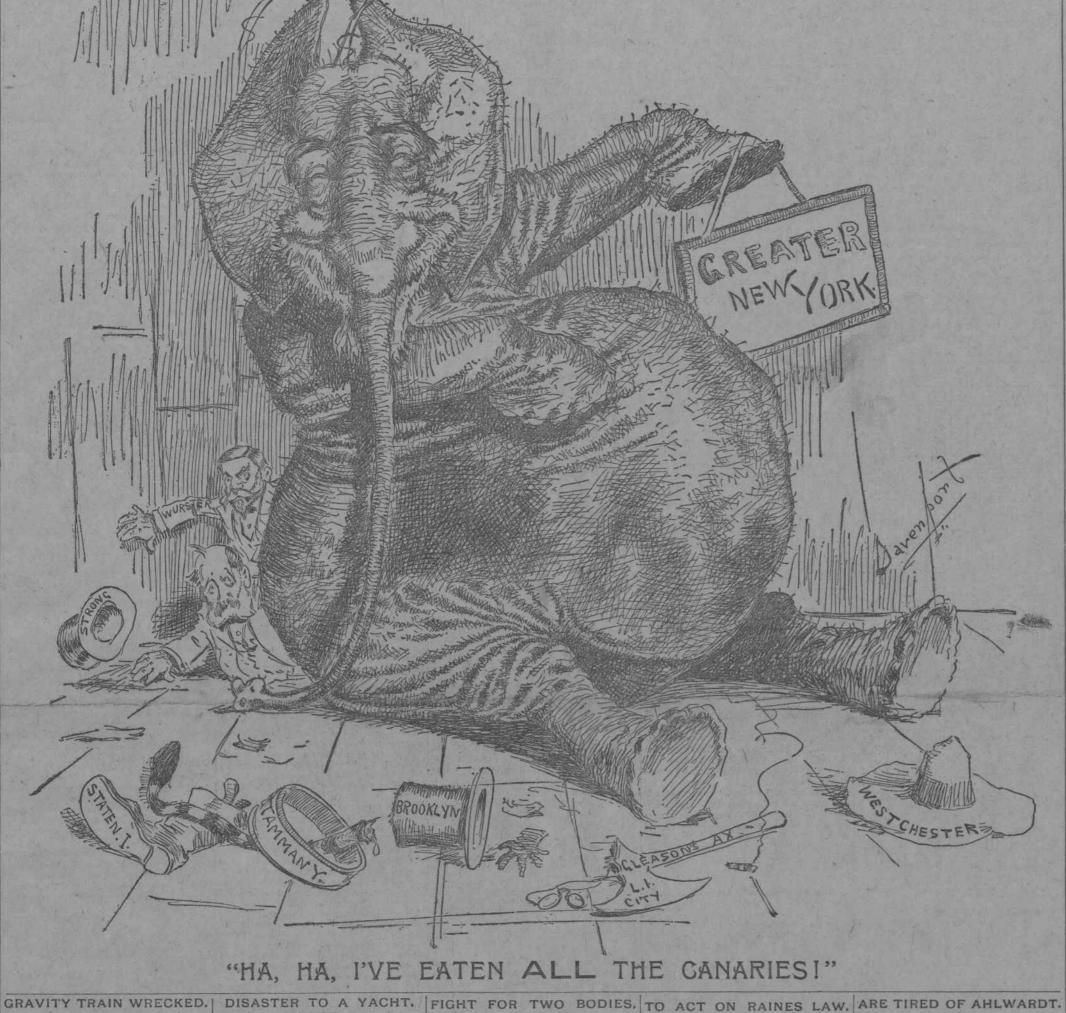

BOTH TALKING AT ONCE, The bill was introduced by Mr. Wilson of New York, and several days ago he recelved a copy of an anonymous circular severely criticising the bill, ar. Wilson turned the communication over to Mr. Hall, who is an ardent supporter of the measure. The members of the committee dropped into the committee room to-day and everything was proceeding as calmly as a ship at anchor in harbor. Suddenly angry exclamations were heard, and it was discovered that Representatives Money and Hall, who were seated on opposite sides of the long table in the committee room, were emulating the Corbett-Fitzsimmon style of fighting-both trying to talk at

Mr. Money had said that the entire object of the bill was to provide certain offlcars with rank, pay and some command Hall replied that a man making that statement did not believe it himself. The Mis sissippian construed this as meaning that he had been called a llar and he promptly labelled Mr. Hall as "a -- llar.

Hall and Money then indulged in a few ore pyrotechnic personal denunciations. Suddenly the Missourian reached out and secured a large glass ink well, weight about a pound, and hurled it with all his force at Mr. Money.

A DRAW ON INKSTANDS: well struck the wall just under a large pleture of the cruiser Columbia. Mr. Money then grabbed the glass inkstand in front of his seat and shied it at Mr. Hall. Hall did some good side stepping and the miswent through the back of a chair. This fusiliade of inkstands and bottles had the effect of discoloring the clothing of the combatants and of the inoffensive members

HIS PRISON LIFE OF HORRORS.

The Youth Was Thrown Into Jail on the Perjured Statement That He Was a Rebel Leader, and Spain at Last Admitted Her Mistake.

Havana, April 23.-Walter Grant Dygeri has at last been released from the military prison at Guines. He arrived in this city to-night, and is in good health and high spirits. He will leave for his home it Illinois as speedily as possible.

FREDERICK W. LAWRENCE.

Young Dygert reached Cuba early in Febuary. He was an adventurous lad, and his purpose was to better his condition. He had been in the Island less than two weeks when, on February 23, he was arrested am. thrown into a fifthy dungeon on the suspicion that he was the dangerous rebel olonel known as "The Inglesita."

The alleged capture of this wily rebel eader was wired to Madrid on the authority of the Captain-General of Cuba, but those who saw the man knew he could not be "The Inglesita." He couldn't speak s word of Spanish, and, besides, he was but a

It was through the labors of Charles Michelson, while acting as correspondent of the Journal in Cuba that the cruel and illegal treatment of young Dygert became known to the American public. Consul-General Williams, at Havana, was appealed to to intervene in his behalf as an American clitzen, but his movements were se slow that United States Senators Palmer and Cullom, of Illinois, and Representatives Hopkins, Lorimer, White and Cannon, from the same State, took up his case. The State Departm of was finally moved to ction, and Spain at last relented.

Since the investigation was made there was no room for question that Dygert was not a rebel leader, but an inoffensive American. His release was delayed by red tape and official formalities. There was a question also of inducing Dygert to sign a paper freeling the Spanish Government from damages for his false arrest. This paper he refused to sign. Walter Grant Dygert was born at Nunda, Ill., on July 14, 1872. His parents moved to Greenwood in 1884, where they obtained for their son such schooling as the place afforded. He had better opportunities in Woodstock, Ill., where he spent several erms in the public schools.

Walter left home on March 25, 1890, for Idaho, there he spent five years alternately eaching school and working on farms and railroads during vacation. During the last two years of his stay in Idaho he was employed in a gold mine

Soon after his return home in November last he expresser the desire to go to Florida on a prospecting tour. He went there last February, and his parents hoped to hear that be had succeeded in his plans. Instead of this came the disappointing gert is five feet seven and a half inches tall, has dark hair and eyes, and weighed 165 pounds when he left home. He is a miner by trade, and his father, Hiram Dygert, now lives at Greenwood, Ill.
